The Journal of International Voices

An Exciting New Chapter!

We are excited to announce the launching of Translingual: The Journal of International Voices, a publication featuring the writing of international students. These writing pieces can be academic (work created in class), creative (poems, stories), informative (reviews, advice, experiences), or reflective and will give students a platform to share their work with an authentic, campus-wide audience. We are beginning to collect submissions and anticipate the first issue to be published on December 5th, 2022. This publication from the Intercultural English Language Programs offers an opportunity for international students to share their voice with one another and the university community.

Submissions

The deadline for submissions is November 14, 2022. If you have any outstanding writing pieces from your current courses or know students who enjoy writing, encourage them to consider submitting their work to the journal. Pieces can be submitted at the link below.
