

Call for Submissions

¿Qué Pasa, Ohio State? Making Space for Latinx Scholarship and Community

Sponsored by the Office of Diversity and Inclusion

Rolling Deadline

What is Qué Pasa?

Qué Pasa is a student-led publication that celebrates the achievements of our Latinx community. Each issue addresses a theme that speaks to or highlights Latinx communities, particularly at OSU (Ohio State University). It aims to provide a space for voices across all fields and majors to share, express, and highlight Latinx experiences and ideas. ¿Qué Pasa, Ohio State? actively seeks contributions to its print magazine, online publication, and blog from individuals who feel an affiliation to the Latinx community at The Ohio State University. We are interested in any of, but not limited to, the following:

- Academic/scholarly pieces from any discipline. Interdisciplinary pieces are especially welcome.
- Personal experience/nonfiction pieces that express experiences of interest to the Latinx community.
- Experiences resulting from research programs or internships, particularly those of a transnational perspective.
- Reflective or critical pieces on the arts, such as films, television, animation, novels, poetry, and so on.
- Creative pieces such as prose fiction, poetry, graphic storytelling/comics, and visual art.
- Responses to featured events and lectures on campus, providing readers with your take of an invited speaker's talk.

We invite you to share your interest and ideas for contribution to this Fall issue with our Editor, Irma Zamora, at her email address: zamora.59@osu.edu.

Our current issue can be found online at quepasa.osu.edu

Connect with Qué Pasa on Social Media:

Facebook: Que Pasa OSU

Instagram: @quepasaosu