

Talking About the Middle East: Dialogue #4

Khan el-Khalili, Cairo Egypt. By Erica Chang via Wikimedia commons CC 4.0

Hannah Kosstrin
Joy McCorriston
Aaron Yarmel

Yiğit Akin
Naomi Brenner
Johanna Sellman
Ori Yehudai

Jenan Qaraqish
Sara Weinstein

The fourth in our series of dialogues about Multi-Ethnic Cultural Reproductions in the Middle East (MCRME). It's an opportunity to:

- Join the conversation about Middle Eastern cultures and experiences
- Connect with Middle East experts and scholars
- Participate in facilitated discussions on important contemporary issues
- Be part of a project that bridges cultural perspectives

This collaborative project brings together scholars and community members to create spaces for thoughtful dialogue and shared inquiry. By centering multiethnic and multireligious histories and the voices of those who navigate in-between spaces, the project models new approaches to understanding power, belonging, and humanity in the region and on our campus. This dialogue will engage themes of coexistence, identity, and cultural production. We will focus on themes from MCRME dialogues this year, and what participants would like to see in the coming year. Join us!

April 9th 5:30 pm -7:00 pm

Enarson 018

scan to learn more!

GET INVOLVED!

go.osu.edu/MCRME

Melton Center for Jewish Studies
Middle East Studies Center
Center for Ethics and Human Values
Global Arts + Humanities | Cross-Disciplinary
Research Exchange

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY