

Teaching Today's Egypt

Fri, October 9, 2026

10:00 am - 11:00 am

Enarson Classroom Building, Room 160, or via live stream

Ottoman Historian and experienced Middle East Studies Educator, Barb Petzen, will highlight tangible ways to engage students with today's Egypt and create memorable learning experiences. Join us in-person or the live stream online through our Youtube, Facebook or LinkedIn. You will:

- Discover experiential approaches to teaching about contemporary Egypt.
- Gain insights for collaborating across fields and translating them into engaging, academically grounded learning about Egypt and the Middle East.
- Walk away with concrete teaching ideas connected to learning outcomes, classroom resources, and assessment strategies.

Together we will consider how our unique backgrounds and expertise might support future curriculum development, site visits, classroom resources, and public programming as part of our Seeds of Middle Eastern Culture program in partnership with All THAT after school program. "Teaching Today's Egypt" will focus on Egypt as a dynamic contemporary society as well as a historically rich and globally connected place. The session will open conversation about how university faculty can help create meaningful learning opportunities for younger students, educators, and public audiences.

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

Middle East Studies Center

facebook.com/mesc.osu - x.com/mesc_osu • go.osu.edu/mesc-linkedin

mesc.osu.edu | mcclimans.2@osu.edu