Changes in the routines of domestic life were among the most striking social phenomena of the period between the two World Wars, when the home came into focus as a problem to be solved. Machines for Living shows how the modernization of the home led to profound changes in domestic life and relied on a set of emergent concepts that form the basis of literary modernism. Rosner's work develops a new methodology for interdisciplinary modernist studies and shows how the reinvention of domestic life is central to modernist literature.
